

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In order to manage money information in a variety of forms, a home use terminal 100 representing a 5 household account book terminal apparatus is connected to a network and receives account data such as from bank terminals 121, 131 and 141 connected to the network and from a shop terminal 150 opened on the network. A management unit 104 in the home use 10 terminal converts the received account data into account data of a predetermined format, judges an overlap between the converted account data and the account data stored in a memory device 110 and stores non-overlapping data into the memory device 110, and 15 the account data stored in the memory device 110 are displayed according to an instruction from a user on a display unit 103 while classifying between income and expenditure.